#1 DCBL turned up at home address for Ltd Company debt

 30 Jun 2016 20:24

Right were do I Start!! On the 20th June 2016 I was visited by bailiffs from a company called DCBI. The bailiff Just pushed his way into the house. He parked his car in front of mine and said you ant going any were!

Then the gloves came off he terrorised me & wife until we parted with £6k. The writ was in the wrong address and we never owed the monies. Any way I won't to hear from anyone who has got there monie back! Having found this site I also want to hear from any one who has suffered the same kind of fate. We are going to gather all the evidence and present it to the Police to get some kind of investigation underway. We need to put these tossers out of business. I look forward to hearing from you.

I think you just contacted me via the helpline.

As discussed, the writ is in a Ltd company name, and the bailiff cannot attend a directors home address because the debtor is a body corporate Ltd company and does not live there. It can only carry on a trade or business at its business address.

In any case, the judgement debt was out of time to be transferred up for enforcement, so we can look at the transfer form and see what information was entered to apply for the transfer.

Pushing his way into a house revoked everything that followed because the law says force cannot be applied to a person. Paragraph 24(2) of Schedule 12 of the Tribunals Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 states;

- (2)A power to use force does not include power to use force against persons, except to the extent that regulations provide that it does.

If you can also provide me the documentation explaining the fees DCBL charged you, we can also have a detailed assessment hearing and ask the court to validate them. The costs in bringing this proceeding is also charged to the bailiff company because they breached regulations.

Redress for the money taken is recovered in an action in the county court. A detailed assessment is in the High Court registry. The grounds are the writ is defective, wrong address) and paragraph 66(1) states;

- Remedies available to the debtor

66(1) This paragraph applies where an enforcement agent—

- (a) breaches a provision of this Schedule, or
- (b) acts under an enforcement power under a writ, warrant, liability order or other instrument that is defective.

You are not the debtor, the Ltd company is: Paragraph 10 states;

- An enforcement agent may take control of goods only if they are goods of the debtor.

The debtor is a body corporate, so the debtor cannot 'live' at your address, on the address it carries on a trade of business. Paragraph 14(6) states;

- (6) Otherwise premises are relevant if the enforcement agent reasonably believes that they are the place, or one of the places, where the debtor—
 - (a) usually lives, or
 - (b) carries on a trade or business

If you choose to bring them, I can see DCBL losing a lot of money and will have to pay back all the money taken.

We can have a detailed assessment. The writ can determine what the fees should be. DCBL pays your solicitors costs.

I've got your docs, and I'll download them shortly. I'll draft your court documents and propose it to a solicitor for CPR 84.16 detailed assessment and an action under Paragraph 66(2) of Schedule 12.

Once I have assigned you a solicitor, I'll teleconference with you and the solicitor together to discuss how your case will progress.

When we are all happy, I will sign off both cases (the CPR 84.16 and the Para 66 claim) over to the solicitor and he will lodge a Notice of Acting with the creditor and DCBL. Neither DCBL nor the creditor need to contact you again because you are at this point forward, legally represented.

If you decide to have the work done on a Damages Based Fee Agreement, often called 'no-win no-fee', it costs you nothing, and in any case you don't need to go to court.

Both cases are indemnity based, That means because the other party is in breach of regulations, in this case CPR 84.16 and Paragraph 66(2), the creditor will be liable for all your solicitor's costs (as well as mine). It is up to the creditor to recover them from the bailiff company's indemnity insurance.

#8 Re: DCBL turned up at home address for Ltd Company debt

We can ask DCBL in a recorded teleconference call and lay their response before the court. We can then go after DCBL who can take the hit for their client.

For the detailed assessment, we don't need that information anyway.

I have now found the creditors details full address. We also hold the bank in full contempt in this matter. Having told the bank that the PIN number was terrorised from my wife they held the payment for 3days and marked it as disputed! Then on the 4th day paid it over to DCBL with out carrying out any investigation. Disgusting!!!!

You can bring a claim against the bank, but I think it's better to have a detailed assessment and a paragraph 66. That will cost them a lot more than a simple chargeback.

I can give you a chargeback template if you want it.

04 Jul 2016 17:18

Got it. Calling you now.

You have a case.

- Pushed past to gain entry. Contrary to Para 24(6) Schedule 12
Wrong address on the writ. Defective writ: Para 66(2) Schedule 12,
No NOE – address is wrong. Paragraph 7(1) of Schedule 12 and regulation 3 of the 2014 Fees regs
Debtor is a Ltd company. Client is only a director. Paragraph 10 Schedule 12
Debtor is a Ltd company (ceased trading), cannot “live” at home address. Para 14(6) Schedule 12

Fee irregularity.

- Detailed Assessment Hearing under CPR 84.16

Claim for trespass, bailiff searched drawers, filmed your wife getting dressed using a bodycam, made you get money in one hour while bailiff rummaged your house. Typically this type of claim pays about £6000 plus you get your solicitors costs paid.

He may feature on channel 5 but I have injuncted the TV company on several of his attendances to stop the footage being broadcast.

The TV company is aggressively defending them, but not legally represented. Its just harsh language for now.

He shows a bit of a bruise where an eye is blackening. He probably took one punch and in true Sheila Harding style, it turned into "a right kicking" by the time it reached the net.

I saw an episode of that Can't Pay programme and they took possession of a flat that turned out to be a brothel, they did not even have the decency to blur the faces of the girls that worked there. They had no proof and one of them said she had been renting for 2 weeks, I would have thought they would be in legal trouble if she brought a case.

I do not know how they can make programmes documenting misery, regardless of rights or wrongs of debt owed.

This was the reaction when Brinkworth landed an injunction and the bill for refusing to resist broadcasting my client and his property on TV.

I did laugh at the factual error (Human Rights) and the name of the person signing. The application was nothing to do with human rights.

There's a few more of these to follow.

How did that work out for you? I heard the judge was most displeased with your comparisons to the "Germans invading Poland" and other exaggerated claims. It's a shame you were led down a path that was only ever going to lead to failure, embarrassment and further financial loss. This is what Jason does; he gives people false hope and makes them believe they have a case, so he can earn money by referring people to solicitors. He contacts Mr Brown every now and then trying to get a reaction and trying to convince him there are a number of cases waiting to go to court, but these cases never materialise. Maybe it would help if people reading this forum didn't automatically believe what a complainant says and understand that there are always two sides to a story. Especially when the complainant is accusing a "professional, polite, calm and courteous" (the judge's words) Enforcement Agent of trying to "record his wife getting dressed" and naming him in the letter to the court, "a sex case peeping tom pervert". How could you ever believe this kind of comment would go down well with a judge???

A HUGE mistake, but you're not the first and you won't be the last.

Maybe if you hadn't have blatantly lied in your letter to the court when you state you "shouted at Mr Brown to move his car off your driveway" and "he refused to show me his ID or the writ" and "he pushed past me to gain entry" and pretty much everything else you say from then on, you wouldn't have burdened yourself further with over £4,000 in court costs.

I do not think the members of this forum have any choice but to believe what people say.

The seems to be a lot of pollution of threads on this forum with the same people hurling abuse at others. If people are abusive, do not offer anything constructive to the OP, it is quite reasonable to clean up the thread and delete vexatious posts. There are no rights here, it is the owners forum and he sets the rules, just like any other forum. Personally I would just move the vexatious posts to a single thread elsewhere on the forum.

I have now downloaded every episode of Can't Pay and Sheriffs, there are loads of abuses of the 2013 regulations. I am collating a video to present to MP's to show more regulation is needed.

I am a debtor, my advice to anyone is to pay any debt they can afford before it gets to HCEO level, even if there is a CCJ they can show the Court they can only afford £1 a month and that will prevent it going further.

The HCEO route just adds costs and exposes one to bully boy tactics. Ironically it is a con for the Creditor too because anything serious requires them to cough up more money that they probably will not get back, it is called "throwing good money after bad" but the HCEO firms do not care, they are there to get their own fees and add 8% to the debt.

If you are in a position like me where you really have nothing to lose, nothing worth taking, I think the best option is to not engage them. Do not answer the door because as you can see on Can't Pay, they have this "put one foot across the threshold" technique, they then wait for the resident (who may not even be the debtor) to back off to call the police and they then walk in. I have even see some do it with the chain on, trying to get the creditor to respond to the aggression so they can try further tactics.

They call the Police if you are violent and then walk in behind them.

They will say "I need to see that you can't afford repayments" just so they can get in.

They will put paperwork through the door with an inflated amount to make you come out and dispute it.

Anything to get you engaging.

Basically all they do is threaten things you care about, it might be your children if they are the debtor, it may be your car if it has value and is not on finance, but most of what they say is complete bullshit.

For example, they have only been paid £60 to upgrade it to HCEO, so they will go back to the Creditor and ask them if they are prepared to fund the risk of towing the car. The new rules say they have to hold it for at least a week before they auction it and then it may be there longer if the auction is not immediately after that. Cars get sweet FA at auction. So the Creditor is looking at £500 tow fee, a minimum of 7 days at £75 a day for storage, that means £1k, now even if parkers say a car is worth £1500 it may not get £1k at auction, it may get £600 so the creditor has to pay the £400 difference.

So the reality is that they are looking for cars worth at least £2k, that are not on finance JUST to cover the tow and storage fee, nothing for the debt. They can threaten to take a car away, they can even put a clamp on it for a time to up the pressure, but if you "do not engage" they really have little choice other than to go away. They may come back again or TRY to add the 8%, but if they have not engaged the debtor and do not have proof of that, then the 8% can be disputed at a later date.

For me they have been numerous times, they have been very aggressive, they threatened to break in even though they have NO RIGHT to do so as it not a state debt but a private debt, "If you do not answer the door we MAY have to break in". A complete lie and empty threat, Again do not respond, do not engage.

Their whole game is to get you to engage, so they can threaten what you or yours care about, They SAY they will take a car that is not registered to the debtor (which could leave them exposed to legal action), they SAY they will take the TV, but it will not get the value of collection and storage. £50 at auction if they are lucky!

They are not allowed to take your bed, sofa, wardrobe, washing machine, cooker, fridge in one programme they even said they leave 1 TV so what else is there in the average home that is worth taking?

Anything they take can be replaced for free on Freecycle.org, I spoke to someone on another forum who said they told the HCEO through the door to cut out the middleman and use their van to go collect stuff off Freecycle and auction it for their debt! 😁

Your biggest weapon is to not give a shit about anything they might take and once you realise you have nothing of real value it makes no sense to engage them. If you do engage them they may be there for 5 hours harassing you to call friends or raise money, Well F that, I imagine most debtors owe a lot of creditors not just the one who paid £60 for a bunch of former clamper bully boys to harrass. I heard one say "you have to prioritise this debt because it is a high court debt" complete bollocks, I will let the Trustee sort it out and you will get jack shit, there are no preferential creditors.

They did try quite hard to test the security of the door, place I am in was recently painted, they banged so hard on door that it cracked the paint outside door frame.

They were quite lucky because in my mindset if they forced they way in it would cross the line about what I am prepared to do.

My advice for debtors is to get the appropriate debt management option from one of the charities like stepchange.

IVA under £7k

DRO under 20k cost £90 absolves all debt if your circumstances do not improve within a year ceases all recovery

Bankruptcy above £29k cost £700 (less if on benefit) absolves all debt if your circumstances do not improve within a year ceases all recovery, may have to make a payment to Trustee for up to 16 years but rare.

My advice for Creditors is not to waste your £60 for anything but commercial debt and even then to make sure the debtor was personally liable. It might sound tempting paying £60 but that is just a low entry point to further costs. You might see all these repayments on the TV but remember they are paying the High Court Enforcement Officers fees first. The debtor will then get advice, do a DRO and you get nothing.

My advice for HCEO's is go find a more honourable job, karma has a way of coming back at you for the stress you cause others, hence one TV HCEO is now facing leukemia. Can't Say I have any pity. You reap what you sow. 😡

These proceedings are sill in progress, I have assigned the fee earner (Barrister).

The judge made one count of factual error and one count error of law.

EAC2 complaint must be made on the correct form. It was not. The court was not entitled to avail itself to 84.20(5) of the Civil Procedure (Amendment No.2) Rules 2014 to make an order for costs.

if an EAC2 was brought then the grounds would have been (and still can be):

- Pushed past to gain entry. Contrary to Para 24(6) Schedule 12 (now dismissed but subject to bodycam footage proving either way)

Wrong address on the writ.

Debtor is a Ltd company. Client is only a director. Paragraph 10 Schedule 12

Debtor is a Ltd company (ceased trading), cannot "live" at home address. Para 14(6) Schedule 12 (EAC2 judge agreed no business was at the address).

No NOE – address is wrong. Paragraph 7(1) of Schedule 12 and regulation 3 of the 2014 Fees regs CCJ dated 05 November 2009 – out of time to transfer up. Writ is dated May 18 2016 contrary to CPR 30.2.

The creditor has got some trouble coming up. Now a barrister has joined the proceeding and intends to unravel the costs order, then take the appropriate action against the creditor. I can see someone getting a stonkingly big bill.

Okay, the Croydon Advertiser was lying?

She wasn't even a debtor. She only wanted to buy a car but she walked away from you.

How difficult is it for you guys to get your facts straight? You know nothing at all about that situation, but once again, you believe the only side you've heard and continue to be ignorant to that fact that there are ALWAYS two sides to any story.

I only learned about the EAC2 after the costs order was made.

I asked to see the original EAC2 form. He didn't make one. The costs order is invalid.

Fee earner assigned. Simple.

The problem I have with the people who run this forum is that they just don't seem to grasp the concept that there MUST be some kind of recourse if people don't pay the money they owe. What would happen to society and our economy if nothing was done about it? If you just think about that for a second and try to look beyond your own ignorance, I'm sure you would agree that there needs to be a process where the money is recovered. The next issue is HOW it's done. I completely understand that there are some agents out there who act in a way that's totally unprofessional and unlawful, and these individuals should be dealt with accordingly. This forum is just somewhere a debtor can get advice on how to exploit loop holes in enforcement law and cause as many problems for the agents as possible by making complaints

How can you know that, was this a case from TV, if so which programme and what episode?

I agree.

However, this was a debt for a limited company. There was clearly no goods belonging to the company inside the house was there? You say that the woman wasn't "terrorised" How many women do you know that would put a .5k debt that wasn't theirs on their credit card? What do you think made her do that if it wasn't terror? You ought to be thoroughly ashamed of yourself pal. 2 sides of the story? Yeah right.

Gary Brown is an utterly appalling human being who is driven by commission. He didn't care who paid, or how much they paid, just as long as he got it up to the sale stage.

Gary Brown abused his power purely to ensure he earned the maximum commission possible from the visit.

He showed his true colours when he intimidated that young girl on Facebook over lost commission.

Bailiffs exploit loopholes to their advantage—Why should debtors not be afforded the same opportunity?

Instead of coming on here gloating, you ought to take a long hard look in the mirror pal.

I don't mind opinions. Just like you, I have seen the video. It is a sickening abuse of power. Gary Brown needs to be stopped, one way or the other. he broke every rule in the book and then claims to be bothered about debt?

He doesn't give a fck who owes what. All he is concerned about is using his power to maximise his commission.

It would be interesting to see how many times Brown hits the sale fee compared to other DCBL agents.

Contrary to what Jason has said, the judge has made SEVERAL errors on both fact and law. It is not for me to take it up with the judge though. This claim was only a complaint about Brown's fitness to hold a certificate. Browns breaches of legislation in the video are into double figures. So are his breaches of National Standards. Brown should have been ordered to undergo retraining at the very least. However, the key points were not raised, as you have previously pointed out. It is a marathon, not a sprint and I think that you may have jumped the gun a little with your gloating. The judge wasn't corrupt but it was a bit one sided wasn't it, given the Claimant had no legal representation?

Many companies won't touch Brown. He has been around the block a bit hasn't he? Why has he changed company so many times within such a comparatively short period? I've been aware of him since his Marston days. I can tell you also that the HCEOA are also aware of him, not that DCBL will care about that I guess?

Gary, I think you are foolish to come to these boards discussing proceedings still in progress.

This is going to start Sheila and the cry-babies.

Remember, it was you that lifted a car in Swindon, and the Judge made you put it all back.

Your interpretation, the £1350 exempt goods allowance is license to take a car valued over that sum ceases to be exempt, was royally defeated.

It's too late, she has already started.

Can I just make this clear: Neither Jason nor Sheila Harding have a clue about this matter and anything either of them say should be treated with a pinch of salt. Jason was not involved in this, other than giving the incorrect advice that because the writ was for a different address, DCBL were not able to enforce at the private home. Of course, they were permitted to enforce at anywhere, where they reasonably believed that the company was operating.

Gary (if it is Gary) is away with the fairies. I have watched the video in question numerous times. It would make a fantastic training video on how not to enforce. The breaches of Schedule 12, TCG Regs & the Fees Regs are frequent as is the total disregard to National Standards. Gary is dishonest and deceitful throughout, even down to pretending to make phone calls that clearly didn't happen. I see no reason why anything he says on here should be believed.

It has.

The grounds brought are one count factual error, and one count error of law. There could be more.

Can't discuss any more than that. A barrister will be representing the client. Costs are guaranteed when a judge makes an error.

I am finding out more and more, that judges believe they are protecting bailiffs by making an order against an unrepresented party by creating an error of law or fact. It could be the judge thinks the individual does not know otherwise.

Lawyers cannot earn from EAC2 or small claims track. When an appeal is needed, its top money. That is why I draft the appeal before I draft the claim itself. It's become predictable how a judge will behave in a bailiff case when the other party is unrepresented.

Has the claimant been granted leave to appeal? You don't know this.

Secondly, there is no appeal against the decision. Gaz lives to fight another day. A claimant may only appeal against the costs order.

He can and as far as I know he is appealing the cost order. That is where the factual error and error of law comes in.

He is not contesting or appealing the decision of the grounds of the original complaint letter. That is something the creditor pays through the small claims track. I don't know what money is being sought.
