Do I have to include a tagline?

Blame Game

Rather than post a comment, I felt this deserved a whole page.

I would say by the eloquence of your many, many replies, you are anything but distressed. In fact your replies have been along the lines of challenging me to find out more information. The fact is you have posted over 130 comments, never once mentioning 'distress'. You have now decided to, once again, play this tired old card.

No-one has mentioned your siblings apart from you. Your 'Weekly Gripe' post laid it out for all to see, I just reposted it. No-one is 'monitoring' you. If you don't want people to read what you write, don't write it. Stay away. Don't post. You have been told all of this before by the police. Heed their advice.

This site has been careful to not name anyone other than freely available user-names, which is more than can be said for your old blogs. You happily posted full names and addresses without giving any thought to any 'distress' this may cause.

You have made yourself a target with the fabrications over the years, posting on an extraordinary number of forums, at times using more than one identity on a single forum. You have posted as women. You have left yourself open to ridicule. The one thing you could be proud of, being a Headteacher, you ruined by lying about the dates.

One moment you can't walk more than a few yards, the next you are walking up the mountains. One moment you disappear and need rescuing, the next you are actually just taking your dog out for some solitude. One moment you say you have needed to give up driving, the next you are talking about the new car you've just bought. One moment you say you have to survive on just your pension, the next you talk about your DLA and your wife's carers allowance. One moment you run two charities funded by you (despite the poverty), run the local choir, care for your neighbour with Alzheimer's, and take in homeless people, the next moment you need 24 hour care and can't even leave the house.

Do you see how all of this looks? Do you see why you leave yourself so open? Do you see why people don't believe anything you say? You have a chronic siege mentality and desperate to be taken seriously, with a desperate need to seem authoritative on anything. This is probably because your self-esteem is on the floor. However, seeking to paint yourself as a victim, seeking sympathy does not grant you respect. You need to get your nose out of that women's backside and discover your own opinion, not slavishly follow the opinion of others.

You, as someone who has suffered such a massive financial meltdown, should not be agreeing with someone who argues that fees should be added to an AOE order or who constantly fights the bailiff's cause. Your empathy should be lying with those who are trying to reduce or even remove these charges. As I'm sure you know, in the majority of cases, these people are the ones who can least afford it.

This is of course just my freely expressed opinion.

EDIT: You have continually asserted most, if not all, information on here is incorrect. I have asked many times to highlight any errors so I can put the record straight, but you have never responded, so I ask again. Where are the errors?

18th March 2015

Our friend has continued to try to post more self-pitying comments. I'm keeping them on moderation for the time being to stop this site falling into disrepute.

However, I will say this, and again this is my opinion. Someone who claims to be so ill with so many professionals in his life such as Consultant Psychiatrists, nurses and those dealing with his 'Aspergers' would have robust strategies in place to keep him and those around him safe. He has claimed he is so distressed at the moment that he has locked his family out of the house.

In the past he has claimed to have bitten through a Dyson cord to use to hang himself, attempted to drink bleach and poured scalding water over himself. He has claimed to require the Helicops to rescue him on countless occasions including a time when he went swimming in a freezing lake in the middle of the night. If any of this were as true as he claims, strategies, risk assessments and emergency plans would be in place.

If he is at such a risk of harm to himself and others why are procedures not in place? Why is he not kept in a safe environment? How many times would Helicops use their valuable resources to continually rescue him before taking more robust action?

There also seems to be one common factor in all of this. These 'episodes' occur when he reads what others having written about him on the internet. This is sourced from freely available information he himself has posted about his life. Being on the internet causes him these 'problems'. With all these professionals supposedly in his life you would think one of them would be ensuring that the extraordinary amount of time he spends freely posting about himself then 'going into one' when others question him would be stopped and replaced with something more productive. You would think that since this internet usage causes him so many problems, leading him to harm himself and others, one of these 'professionals' would be taking action.

That is why, in my opinion it is not believable. The constant need to continually quantify his posts with comments such as 'As you know I have a mental illness', or 'As you know, I used to be a high-flying Headteacher before illness forced me to retire', or even 'As you know I run two charities funded from my own pocket'. It's boring! Have a read through the posts – you turn every subject round to yourself and it gets very tiresome and ridiculous.

Now I repeat, you have the opportunity to rub our noses in it. Show something, anything, that backs up your side of things. There must be photos of you leading the choir, playing the violin, viola, church organ or guitar. There must be press reports or cuttings of such a community minded man who is not shy in self promotion. There must be photos of you kayaking at competition level, rock climbing, ice climbing or preparing for a parachute jump. There must surely be one picture of the many motor-homes you've owned. Shut us all up.

Comment Cauldron Kate tried to post today at 2.59pm (with my replies):

CK is pleased to see past errors being corrected AT LAST! It is very coincidental you choose those two particular topics is it not? CK looks forward to MANY, MANY, more amendments to the incorrect content now beginning to be shown, albeit very minor examples – it is a start. CK hopes WordPress allows enough free space to cover all the incorrect information.

Two particular topics? Nope, got me there. Nor can I see where ‘errors’ are supposed to have been corrected.

CK asserts it was published that a C&T Plan were not in place, and it took intervention by the WAG to get even a draft version. The road has not been an easy one. CK shares your concern about the lack of measures in place and has been fighting this exact issue for a long time. The ultimate fallback is always the Crisis Team who have been proven to be sadly lacking by CK and the police (when dealing with mental health issues) alike.

Not credible. After 12+ years, such a deeply troubled person would have robust plans in place

CK suggests you revise your viewpoint. CK has written only a very small amount in terms of 10-12 years of being ill. You know very little, and have no right to any further information as you would agree.

A very small amount? It’s your favourite subject! Don’t make me publish them.

CK asserts there are photographs and clippings of some of these things. CK asserts you already know this, and know there is no intent to publish personal photographs. If you can find things which remain in the public domain then you are at liberty to publish them if lawful.

There is nothing to be found, nothing at all. Feel free to direct me to any online content or anything I you assert I already know about. I’m pleased you agree I am at liberty to publish things in the public domain.

CK asserts ‘a certain web domain registrant’ (no names) has mentioned the photograph of the motorhome outside a house. You have proof right under your nose, but fail to see it. CK has suggested you speak to this person about another website as proof.

You stated you’d sold your motorhome in January 2014 as you had been told to stop driving by the medics. This was long before any ‘visit’. So unless you’d bought a new one (despite being told you couldn’t drive it), something is askew.

CK has to wonder why none of these suggestions are being acted upon. The incorrect information could now open a floodgate.

CK asserts this comment is NOT inappropriate content, would not cause disrepute, save for the fact you may be worried CK is actually telling the truth after all.

The continued reference to yourself in the third person is very weird, especially as it is a woman’s name. This appears to be a common trait with at least four sites existing where you post as a female. You are doing yourself no favours. I do not believe for one moment that you endure all of these mental health problems, but prefer to construct a persona that you believe grants you special treatment and sympathy, in a pathetic attempt to fit in. Sadly, your ego always takes over and the persona becomes too implausible leading to inevitable ridicule, and you then try to ‘guilt trip’ others in an attempt to rectify your excesses, playing the ‘bullying’ card.

You fully blame others for the way you are. In your mind, it is never your fault, never caused by your actions, never a consequence of the ludicrous claims you make. If the Crisis really are involved with you, perhaps even they have tired of the continuous 'poor me' act. Grow a pair, man. Show some evidence of your exploits and make us all eat humble pie.

I've held my nose and ventured to our fragrant friends latest blog. He makes this comment;

So why has the malicious WordPress blog (he means this blog) been published on the February 19th 2015? I'll tell you. It's because on an old blog of mine, long since deleted, I published the true name of the owner of the Bailiff Help Forum and its sister site, Dealing With Bailiffs.

No, I'll correct you. It was prompted by the blog that comment was posted on! It was to show our friend how it felt to have someone pore over and criticise your every comment. It was also an opportunity to show certain others how it felt.

So do you understand that? The blog you are presently whinging and criticising on is why this blog came to be.

Actually I don't give a toss what others think. I KNOW the truth. Much of the page above is highly inaccurate. Should I not be allowed to post comments on 'lots of forums' without one or two people having such an unhealthy obsession with my private life they take it upon themselves to seek these posts out? That is stalking. That is distressing. Whether or not I appear distressed, you cannot see me and are in no position to judge. I am telling you, your conduct is distressing me. It is freaking me out to be honest.

As for challenging, I have challenged you to publish things as they are so very wrong. If you don't believe things, that is your prerogative; sadly for you, almost everything I have posted is true. You just cannot accept you have got it wrong can you? That is YOUR problem, not mine.

Hunting out every post I make is NOT normal; it is not usual. Do you do the same for anyone else? Do you hunt out every last detail about everyone you know? Do you intentionally deprive me of a private life? Why can I not post like 'an ordinary poster' without fear of retribution? Surely even you can see it is bizarre our interests are so very similar we frequent the same sites? If we don't frequent the same sites, then ipso facto, you are looking for my posts. That is simply sick – and yes, distressing.

Your comments about me cover almost 10 years. People change, neighbours with Alzheimer's die, I led the choir – I don't now as I rarely leave the house, sometimes I can, sometimes I can't. That is the way I am and I don't intend making myself out to be someone I'm not just to fit in with your stereotypical picture of whoever you believe I should be. You are wrong, it is really as simple as that. I may, very occasionally, have told a porkie, but nothing major – we are all fallible. I admit it. Do you?

Yeh he's so distressed. He's still managing to add more pages to his site saying how "distressed" he is. It's the tactic he resorts to every single time rather than face up to his stupid behaviour. Aspergers my arse. Just an excuse for his laziness and childish behaviour.

This is futile. Yes, I'm in the house so I can post. Being distressed does not stop me being able to write. I'm glad I'm providing some entertainment for you all.

If PF had any credibility I might begin to correct some things, but so many of my comments have been amended I have no trust in him not to do the same with further ones. Last night he (forgive me if you're a she) posted a threat to send letters to my family – feel free. He did not name them, but he knows how he did it. Bizarrely my comments in response to that were not published, yet he will be supported here despite the alternative version with unedited comments being live till late last night.

If you are waiting for me to point out errors, you'll be waiting a very long time. I owe it to nobody to prove myself. However, you are following me around the internet making it hard for me to post anywhere. CAG, BHF, my PF site, LB – fair enough, I can understand you commenting on those. When you start delving into car sites (there's loads of them!), camping sites (there's loads of them), and my wife's account on Mumsnet then it is going beyond acceptable.

I repeat almost all of what I have said is true. I make no apologies for having loved adventurous activities when younger. I fail to see what is odd.

I've only needed to edit when you've tried to post names or links. So despite you continuing to moan about errors, you'll make no efforts to show otherwise. Therefore, the 'errors' will continue to be shown. Try to help yourself.
